MASTER FUND COMMENTARY

As of 30 September 2025

Fund Performance

The Signature CIO Growth Fund delivered another month of strong returns in September.

Our overweight position in global equities, with a positive tilt toward US equities, contributed positively to performance. Equity markets broadly advanced as the Federal Reserve cut interest rates for the first time this year, reflecting improved investor confidence. US equities delivered solid gains in September, with the rally extending across sectors, though mega-cap technology names remained key drivers of returns for both the month and the quarter.

Our overweight in Asia ex-Japan also added value. The MSCI Asia ex-Japan Index was the best-performing major equity market over the quarter, supported by a sharp rebound in Chinese technology stocks. Sentiment improved amid policy support for domestic chipmakers, accelerated AI-related investment, and signs of easing trade tensions between China and the US.

On the other hand, our underweight in DM IG Corporate bonds marginally detracted from performance. The segment benefited from lower bond yields and robust investor demand for new issuance, driving compression in credit spreads.

Fund Positioning

We remain Overweight equities relative to bonds and cash, as recent macro data and supportive policy signals continue to underpin the asset class.

Within equities, we have turned Overweight US equities, reflecting their resilient fundamentals. Earnings momentum remains robust, particularly from AI-related investments, while an accommodative monetary backdrop increases the likelihood of a soft landing for the US economy.

We also added to Asia ex-Japan equities, as the region benefits from strengthening of Asia currencies against the USD, which is expected to reduce input costs and boost earnings for domestic corporations. De- escalating trade tensions, and still-reasonable valuations are major tailwinds.

We trimmed Europe ex-UK equities, aligning with our downgrade to Underweight. There is subdued economic growth projections, while trade tariffs and geopolitical tensions, specifically Section 899, remains. In addition, valuations are elevated with 12m forward P/E for the MSCI EU index at around 1 standard deviation above its long-term average.

Within bonds, we maintain our preference for non-USD bonds. Within DM bonds, we favour DM IG corporate bonds over high yield bonds, trimming exposure to DM HY Bonds across portfolios. We expect short term yield to fall more than long end yield (bull steepening). The slower decrease in long end yield provides opportunity for investors to lock in still high absolute yield. Corporate IG bonds, with higher bond duration (higher interest rate sensitivity) will likely outperform HY bonds.

We are optimistic on gold and expect gold prices to sustain a "higher-for- longer" trajectory due to the resumption of Fed rate cuts and strong seasonal demand from India and China. This outlook is further supported by elevated fiscal, stagflation, and policy concerns. Consequently, we raised our 3- and 12-month gold price targets to USD 3,850/oz and USD 4,100/oz, respectively.
