MASTER FUND COMMENTARY

Fund Performance

Even amidst the volatility in financial markets given elevated geopolitical tensions, the Signature CIO Income Fund remained steady and delivered positive returns in January. This can be mainly attributed to the fund's overweight allocation to equities whereby both global growth and dividend equities started 2026 on a strong positive note. Global infrastructure stocks and REITs also registered positive gains, contributing to the fund's performance. For bonds, the preference for emerging market debt also contributed positively, with the underweight allocation to DM high yield bonds remaining as the key detractor.

Fund Positioning

We remain comfortable with the fund's current positioning as we stay overweight on equities. We continue to see equities supported by earnings growth resilience as the rally broadens in breadth beyond the information technology sector. We also stay overweight on infrastructure stocks given their appealing yields and as an inflation hedge in the portfolio should concerns resurface with the recent oil price surge. In fixed income, we stay prudent and remain underweight on DM high yield bonds, preferring emerging market bonds where we see better risk-reward.
